Computing Cost

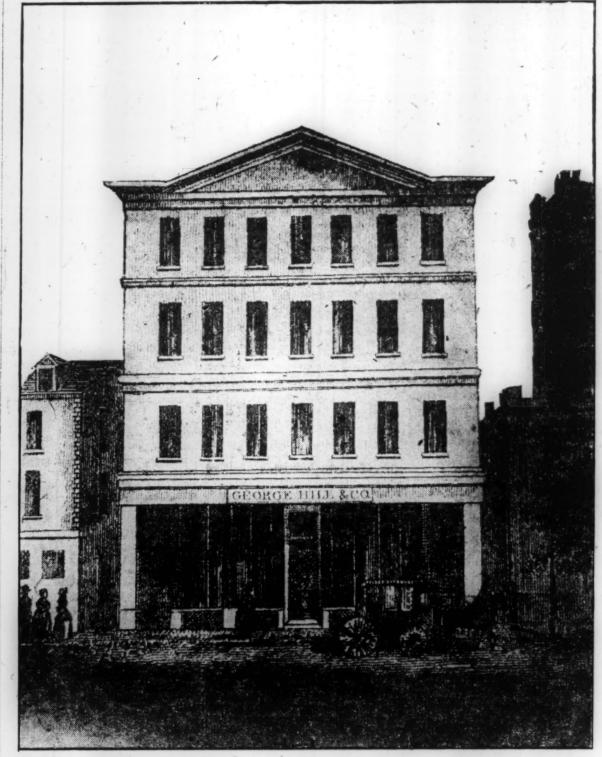

As wages are a leading item in proover without delay or palaver. But it work of a cost nature. His weekly disbursement represents the mass of labor bought by the company for every In the first place probably no two em- purpose. The wages of one employee, building of a certain machine must be or supervision, or any other way, must be run down and charged to such accounts as maintenance, repairs, overhead charges and so forth. Errors are apt to creep in. Important labor items may not be charged properly. False records of cost are the outcome. As the paymaster's cost figures are probably used in making estimates for future work, slack methods in his department can lead to serious leaks.

A ready grasp of these figures and the ability to render them quickly are as important as accuracy, for very often the nature of goods demands that cost be ascertained each day, and the paymaster must be ready to report accurately on any specified item.

The paymaster's figures are often used to determine other points. In a trolley equipment that is offered at a far lower price than anything else of the kind. The paymaster, who has records of repair and maintenance costs, is able to show that this cheapest equipment is really dearest, because the expense for repairs is high, and that on better equipment low. The paymaster must also give perspective to the business by summaries. Very often the nature of the business is such that a certain average expenditure for labor in each department is followed as closely as possible. How far this standard is being adhered to he shows with comparisons that give the labor cost, the number of people employed and so forth, for this week, last week, the same week last year, and the general averages of other years.

HOUSES AND STREETS OF BOSTON THAT LIVE IN THE HISTORY OF THE CITY

This picture shows Summer street on the left from Washington street before the 1872 fire. The building on the right is Trinity church, and in the center, Thorndike hall. On the left is a structure extending Washington street. Thorndike hall was a meeting place for Masonic bodies, and balls and fetes were held there. All these buildings were destroyed by the 1872 fire, and others were erected on the site. These were torn down to make room for a 10-story mercantile structure running half way to Franklin street on Washington and Hawley streets. After the burning of Trinity church, the society erected the structure in Copley square.

LITTLE HELPS FOR WORKERS

No. 39—Keeping Abreast, and Ahead of Work

IT IS a good worker who keeps well abreast of I his work, that is to say, who does not allow his work to "get behind." The world would indeed go forward much more pleasantly if every man or woman who has a certain task to perform each day would never permit his or her work to lag or accumulate until it must finally be pushed through imperfectly, or at the inconvenience of others who are prompt in doing each stroke of work at the right moment.

The foremost enemies to prompt work are 'putting off" unwisely, lack of concentration, indecision. The remedies are simple, always at hand and powerful. For the first robber-habit, the worker should get "the strong-hold" on his work by doing that which is most difficult first. Instead of putting off the hard problem and puttering around with the easy lines of work, dreading the conflict with the hard task which looms up like a high stone wall across the path, go at the hard job vigorously, stick to it, get it done.

If one wakes fairly early in the morning and then lies in bed a half hour putting off the "getup," let him break that habit at the peep o' day and start it with a sense of victory. This selfconquest will help much to win out against all the other "put-off" temptations which may arise during the working hours that follow.

As to the two other thieves of success-lack of concentration and indecision-break the first by doing one thing at a time. Take it up, consider it, do it-avoiding the habit of going part way on a piece of work and then permitting some other task to claim attention, out of its proper order. For indecision: Cultivate careful consideration followed by "yes" or "no," "go" or "stay" -something to the point. It is really better to arrive at a wrong decision at first trial (and thereby learn what not to do) than to dilly-dally along without deciding anything.

If the worker lives temperately, does each stroke of work with energy, concentrates wisely and learns to decide with reason, judgment and common sense, he will surely keep up with his work. Especially those who apply the pen in editorial, literary and advertising pursuits can do even more. They can often write ahead of the daily, weekly or monthly demand. Instead of wasting time in idle pursuits, such workers build for the future. So they miss the struggle of the man who meets each set date with little or nothing ahead. Composers of commercial prose do well to "carry a good stock" of subjects, framework for articles and completed writings. Then like the wise virgins of old they have plenty of oil in their lamps as the call for light may come from day to day.

Within the last few month Russia has begun to adopt a distinctly aggressive policy within her own sphere. As was rejuted out only recently in these colbegun to adopt a distinctly aggressive umns, in the course of an interview with a Persian of wide knowledge and undoubted authority, the attitude of the United Kingdom had been absolutely cor rect, and in every case where troops have been moved or representations made the representations have been regarded as satisfied and the troops withdrawn when legitimate satisfaction has been given.

Rightly or wrongly, on the other hand, the intention of Russia is simply to find a reason for the permanent occupation of the northern sphere, including Te heran. Such an action would undoubtedly be the first step toward bringing the situation there is also unchanged. the Russian and British frontiers in Asia into touch, as England would almost necessarily be driven to enforce her claim to southern Persia, with the result that the extinction of the neutral zone could be only a matter of time.

The key, perhaps, to the Russian policy may be taken from a single sen tence in a leading article, headed "The Dissolution of Persia," which appeared Petersburg. The expedition, the article said, in speaking of the Russian expedition then on its way to the Persian frontier, "is principally directed against the American adventurer Shuster, who is more powerful than the whole Persian government." That was 10 days before the translation of Mr. Shuster's famous anti-Russian letter to the Times had been scattered broadcast in the streets of the capital. According to the Russians, this circulation was the act of Mr. Shuster, but according to the Persians and Mr. Shuster, it was effected by the agents provocateurs of Russia, with a view to supplying a reason for the occupation of the country. Boston's Initial Showing of New and Authentic Fashions for Spring and Summer 1912

This early display is but another example of our ability to present the newest Styles before they are to be seen in other stores—and to do so in a much larger way than would be possible elsewhere.

Those who are planning a visit to Palm Beach or any of the other popular Southern Resorts will find this exhibit one of particular interest and correct information

It is quite impossible to give here any adequate idea of the extensiveness of this showing or the attractiveness of the offerings. We briefly tell below of some of the many new things now on view—there are many others throughout the store.

Imperial Durbar in India Is Pronounced Brilliant Success

Impressive Ceremony and Events Connected With It Reviewed Briefly for Readers of the Monitor

RULERS WELCOMED

Those interested in India's governmental affairs attach great importance to the visit of the King and Queen to that part of the United Kingdom. Among the significant features of the durbar ceremonies was the laying of the first stones of the new capital at Delhi, whence the seat of government will be transferred from Calcutta. A comprehensive with the durbar is presented herewith.

WILLIAM FAVERSHAM TO ACT NOVEL ROLE; VERSHAM TO ACT NOVEL ROLE; MARGUERITE CLARK APPEARS AS STAR

"The Faun" at the Shubert, a Fantastic Society Satire -"Baby Mine" at Majestic, a Lively Farce

"COUNTRY BOY" SOON

NOVEL fantastic comedy is offered in "The Faun," the new play by Edward Knoblauch, in which William Faversham will come to the Shubert theater Monday evening for a two weeks' engagement. Mr. Faversham appears as a mythical creature who lives close to nature and who wanders one evening into the garden of Lord Stonbury, who has met with financial reverses that have plunged him into despair. The faun laughs at Stonbury's discouragement, offers to tell him the names of all the future derby winners, which the faun knows as a fellow creature of the horses. In return the faun is to be introduced into society in modern garb by Lord Stonbury. The faun proves a regular bull in a china shop in his efforts to lead the effete Londoners back to nature, but in the end he brings happiness and good sense to several unhappy and worldly people. A charming love story is engineered by the faun throughout the play. The play has been widely praised for the high grade comedy of its lines and situations, and Mr. Faversham has been declared a success in his creation of a novel character. Miss Julie Opp heads the supporting company, which includes Belmore, Elsie Oldham, Mabel Crawley, H. Nye Chart, Arthur Elliott, Stanhope Wheatcroft, Legai Hobinson.

MAJESTIC-"BABY MINE"

Miss Marguerite Clark, long popular in musical plays, heads the company which begins an engagement Monday evening at the Majestic in "Baby Mine," a farce by Miss Margaret Mayo. The plot, which has been declared very funny everywhere the play has been given, has to do with the complications that arise when a frivolous childless young wife tries to regain her husband's affection by adopting an infant and pretending that the child is her own. Walter Jones appears as a willing friend of the family and others of the original cast will ap-

We were under contract with the builders to turn our corner store over to them January 1st, but due to the unprecedented holiday business that came to us, we could not give any attention to moving. We had hoped for an extension of time, but the contractors held us rigidly to our contract so we have been compelled to literally "pull up our store by the roots" and crowd it promiscuously into the remaining part of our store wherever we could find an inch of space.

Thousands of dollars' worth of brand new merchandise more than we can use-no place to put it. Whole departments have been moved in a night. ACCUMULATION

It seems to be the fate of every importer or manufacturer to have an over amount of confidence at the end of the season—with the result that he will have made up twenty or thirty fine garments or import a like number—with the hope that they will be in time for the late business—and the goods are imported or made up, but the late business is not realized.

Chandler & Co.'s representative visited a number of the finest importers and makers from whom the very best garments are secured-knowing that the above situation would undoubtedly be exactly as predicted—and such was the case.

Ten or a dozen manufacturers were in this very condition and Chandler & Co. thus secured some hundreds of the most beautiful and expensive garments at prices probably lower than garments of like quality were ever sold.

The entire collection to be placed on sale Monday at

The above purchase is a very important one as it includes hundreds of fine Suits, Coats and Dresses. There is no question about the quality as every piece is from some one of the finest makers in the country, and the purchase price was low enough to enable Chandler & Co. to offer the largest assortment and the lowest range of values hitherto known in a sale of the very highest class ladies' apparel. Chandler & Co. have included also many fine pieces from their own stock at very low prices.

Of several hundred pieces, the following are fair illustrations of the values:

A beautiful black Charmeuse Gown, worth 85.00, for 35.00. A light blue Messaline Dress, originally 50.00, now 25.00. A magnificent brocaded Silk Crepe Costume, made to sell for 95.00, priced 35.00. Chandler & Co., during the past two weeks, have made several important purchases of furs, among which was included the stock of the W. G. These have been greatly reduced.

UNDERMUSLINS

Comprising the entire stock on hand of the largest and best manufacturer of fine muslin underwear in the United States

The purchase of this stock marks the passing of this great manufacturer from his old quarters in the down-town district of New York—where he has been located for the past forty years to a larger and more convenient manufacturing plant in the up-town district. The tremendous growth of his business necessitates the removal of this great underwear plant.

January 1st the change takes place. This was decided upon by the members of the Corporation last June. They decided also at this time that they would not remove their large underwear stock on hand to their new quarters, as it would mean a heavy expense and loss of time; and so they determined to close out—to some one house—all their stock at a big discount.

Gowns, Combinations

Skirts—Drawers—Chemises—Corset Covers—Slips

With values based on original Wholesale Cost

The entire purchase will be sold Monday

Chandler & Co. were highly honored by being notified that they should have the first choice—and should be allowed to see the merchandise before any one else in this country— November 1st they closed the transaction, and the largest consignment of underwear ever shipped to Boston was sent to them—So extremely large a shipment was this that it was necessary to place it in storage for a time.

Owing to an iron-bound principle, unfortunately, the name of this great house cannot be used—but customers of Chandler & Co. will readily recognize their favorite styles in this collection. This stock combines goods rarely sold at a discount - Staple styles which are ordered year in and year out-which are in splendid condition, in fact, have never been taken

Problem of Philippines Is Economic, Declares Gov. Forbes

When Henry L. Stimson, secretary of war, in his recent report urged Congress to dispose of the Friar lands in the Philippines in order that more money could be used for public works, he brought up a question of importance to the United States as a whole. Secretary Stimson's further recommendation that a Philippine naturalization law be passed refers indirectly to what Governor-General Forbes has recently had to say about the progress of the Filipinos.

VERY American coming to the islands should be impressed with one thing; that is, he must gain and hold an influence with the Filipino." Nothing that Gov.-Gen. W. Great Opportunities

Then, looking into the future and seeing before him the new Philippines Governor Forbes sums up the situation in this striking fashion:

"But what a wonderful opportunity lies here for a man with real ability, abundant capital and thorough training, who is ready to meet and master what-ever difficulties and obstacles may arise! The breath is fairly taken away with the magnitude of the possibilities. Let any man take the demand for coal and the price it commands in the Philippine Islands for example, and figure the proper development of a really well run and equally well operated coal mine that would dominate this trade and perhaps attract shipping just for the purpose of loading coal.

In our country, for instance, you occasionally see a scowl or a frown on the brow of a small boy or girl when some request is denied in public. Such an expression would in Denmark be looked on with amazement.

The children receive great consideration on all occasions. For instance, on gala-days, like that when the King and Queen of England entered Copenhagen in state, or like that day, more recent, when former President Roosevelt passed through the streets, small children are invariably arranged in front of the wait-

Simple pleasures are enjoyed by all classes of society. The little Princess Margaret, at the age of 14, took a walk with her mother, the Princess Valdemar, every morning about 8 o'clock. She invariably stopped in the street opposite the American legation, and solemnly allowed a horse, whose business brought him there at that hour, to eat a loaf of black bread, rugbrod, from her hand before she proceeded on her promenade. This was part of her daily routine, and it seemed to give her and the horse a great deal of enjoyment.

NUT RACE

At one end of a room are placed two large bowls, or basins, of nuts. The players are then divided into two sides, with captains. To each side is allotted one of the basins of nuts, and the game is to see which side can, in a given time, carry most nuts to the other end of the room. The players take it in turns to dip out nuts from the bowl that belongs to their side, and the method of taking them is to dip the hand into the basin, with the extended fingers close together, and to take up as many nuts as possible on the back of the hand, Of course there is probability of the nuts rolling off the hand as they are being carried across the room, it is the side that works calmly under its captain's orders that wins

The make-up of certain of the prisoners of war, for example, the mirror of Amneris of burnished metal, not glass, hint the care of the mere staging of this spectacle. Besides all this, there is Verdi in his most melodiously melodramatic mood, pouring forth from the opening "Celeste Aida" to the ardors of the closing love duet, air after air that would alone make the fortune of a composer of the day. For the folk do still love a good tune.

Mme. Melis as Aida and Mme. Gay as Amneris, are also, quite apart from their vocal powers, fully worth the expenditure of an evening. One finds no fault with his vocal There was a half barbaric wildness in contribution to the work, if as an actor he is overshadowed by the more intense emotional expressiveness of the two women. His singing was smooth and warm, though his "Celeste Aida" was marred by explosive sounds at the end of sustained phrases. Signor Polese's Amonasro was more impressive as a character study and his singing as fine. Here is also a beautiful voice, warmed by true dramatic fervor.

And one must mention the little blacks who sat down with such excellent concert, flat on the floor when the music dictated.

MUSIC NOTES

Owing to rehearsals of "Le Donne Curiose," the Wolf-Ferrari opera, which is soon to be presented at the Metropolitan opera house, New York, Antonio Scotti will be unable to appear on Monday night at the Boston opera house as previously announced, and his place as lago in Verdi's "Otello" will be taken by Mr. Polese. The management assures, however, that Mr. Scotti will positively appear on Friday night as Tonio Pagliacci."

Arthur Friedheim and John Orth were the pianists and Miss Amy Fay, Riesberg, Lachmund, John Orth and others, made short addresses, at the banquet in honor of the Liszt 'centenary at Hotel Marseilles, New York, on Thursday evening.

Josef Lhevinne, the Russian pianist, arrived from Berlin, Dec. 27 on the Olympic for his fifth American tour under the management of Loudon Charlton. His initial appearances will be as soloist of the New York Philharmonic Society, Jan. 4 and 5, when he will perform the Rubinstein concerto No. 5. On Jan. 7 hevinne will again be soloist of the Philharmonic, playing the Beethoven "Emperor" concerto.

Timely News of Music and the Musician

SYMPHONY CONCERT

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Max Fiedler, conductor, presented its eleventh program at Symphony hall, Friday after-noon, with the solo assistance of Mmc. Berta Morena, soprano of the Metropoli-ton Opera House of New York. One piece had its first performance in America, the Jena symphony, ascribed to the youthful Beethoven. Another piece, Enesco's suite with the unison introduction for violins was on the program, perhaps to give those who liked it at its first performance eight months ago opportunity to revise their impressions, or perhaps to brush up some striking pages of modern instrumentation for reading to the audiences of the next tour. Mme. Morena sang two arias of the greatest possible dramatic impressiveness, in one characterizing Beethoven's Leonora; in the other, Wagner's Bruennhilde. The works performed were the following:

Mozart, overture to "The Marriage of Figaro": Beethoven, "Jena" symphony in major, edited by Fritz Stein; first time in Boston. Beethoven, scene. 'Abscheulicher!" and aria, "Komm,' Hoffnung" from "Fidelio." Enesco, suite for orchestra, op. 9; Wagner, closing scene of "Gotterdammerung."

The new work of course is the one the program is remarkable for. A delicately scored little symphony that might have been written by some one of Beethoven's day or could have been compiled from several works of the epoch of Beethoven and of the one preceding and of the one following him. It could have been built also by somebody writing a good while after the classic period, but schooled in its manner and technique. If the scholar who unearthed this little epic in the depository of documents of the Jena Music College will next bring to light some youthful Beethoven fragments wherewith to supplement it, he will give the world a veritable musical Ossian to hear and-discuss. The Jena servatory professors positively know the youth of Bonn could be a musician father of the man.

Miss Emmy Destinn, singing for the first time in Boston the role of Floria Tosca, will be one of the events of the coming week at the Boston opera house. Miss Destinn's Tosca is well known and widely-praised on the continent and in London. European critics declare that Tosca is her best role. Only a few weeks ago she sung the part in New York for the first time.

TREATY MAIN EVENT

Peace history is being made fast in the United States. More has been accomplished in the last 12 months than was achieved during the decade preceding. The central event was the signing of the arbitration treaties with Great Britain and France. But many factors entered into the international issue before the American people. Chief among them must be counted the untiring energy of the various peace organizations. The visits of foreign arbitration leaders also excrted an influence. With the climax this evening in the great banquet at New York, with President Taft present, a glance backward will show many interesting phases of the peace development during 1911.

It has touched the public pulse just where it Year's Conventions could realize its own interest in the subhas arrived when in large measure the decision of war or peace rests with the decision

In view of this evening's remarkable climax it is of interest to look back and see what those most conspicuous in the work have been doing through the year his firm conviction that peace with honor for the accomplishment of international peace. Certain features stand out more prominent than others. First, of course, although it took place soon after the middle of the year, comes the signing of the arbitration treaties with Great Britain and France at Washington. Further interest attaches to this event because so far the Senate of the United States has not ratified these treaties.

The gift of $10,000,000 which Andrew Carnegie has made to the peace cause came near being the crowning event of the year from a financial standpoint, ment during 1911, that when President ment of his peace fund in December. 1910. But while this act cannot be included among the features of 1911, the effects of the gift can. And because of the money available the campaign of instruction began early in the year through the tours of the leading arbitration advocates abroad, Count Albert Apponyi of Hungary and Baron d'Estournelles de Constant of France. The effect of the addresses delivered by these distinguished foreign statesmen may be gradual, but considering that they spoke in the leading universities and colleges, were everywhere received with enthusiasm, and that the newspapers at last found something picturesque to say about the peace movement; considering the thousands of men and women in all walks of life who have been made wiser as to the cause, not enough importance can be attached to the visits.

Peace Advocacy

Count Apponyi came to the United States under the auspices of the New York Peace Society and the Civic Forum. He remained only a month but in that short time he reached thousands of people who previously had evinced but slight interest in the cause. The Hungarian statesman, who also is his country's delegate to the Hague conferences, attacks the peace problem from BARON D'ESTOURNELLES DE CONits more technical sides. As the President went along he won over senator after senator, and if his journey had accomolished nothing more for his own popularity his fervor in the interest of peace won him favor with a large element.

There are many who believe that even the opposition to the ratification of the treaties with Great Britain and France has been something of value to the movement as a whole. It set the public thinking. It revealed to thousands of people, who never before had given the subject much thought, that a vital issue was at stake. Men who had confined their attention to their business affairs and their social obligations, apart from what the party politics exacted, began to ask what concern these treaties had for them. Then began a series of addresses throughout the country by some of the men conspicuous in the nation's affairs. Everywhere the educational element was at work. The public had tasted peace and wanted more.

The leading factors for the distribution of peace intelligence are the American Peace Society, the Carnegie Fund for International Peace, and the World Peace Foundation. In South America the influence of the United States is rapidly becoming a factor for greater harmony. The Carnegie Fund for International Peace has set aside a large sum to establish exchange professorships. No better peace measure perhaps has ever been conceived than that of having educators from Central and South America visit northern universities, and leading professors in the United States lecture in the southern republics. The ramifications of the Carnegie fund, therefore, are more extensive than appear on the sur-Mr. Carnegie wishes to go beneath the surface and root out sentiment in favor of war before it gets a strong hold.

It is no great surprise that the invitations for foreign representatives to be at the New York peace banquet were accepted with readiness by the ambassadors at Washington. It is conceded movement, and with the diplomatic world centering its attention upon the New York assemblage, which is to hear the latest and most significant things relative to the progress of the movement, universal peace looms upon the 1912 horizon with prospects so bright that even the most sanguine idealist of a decade ago would hardly have dreamed them possible so soon. America is known for doing things on a large scale, the World Peace Foundation has shown and since international arbitration is in the air the promoters of the New York done to make the world look and

OF NATURALISTS BEGUN IN ANDES

PRINCETON, N. J.-Probably the most important undertaking reported aside temporarily, to make way for the ternational Peace Forum, went to Japan Friday at the closing session of the American Society of Naturalists, the American Society of Zoologists and the American Association of Anatomists, was the work begun last summer for the American museum of natural history by Dr. Henry E. Crampton of Columbia University. Dr. Crampton began making a survey of a strip of territory in South America running from the Atlantic coast westward to the high plateau at the base of the Andes. The work will probably cover 10 years time.

The zoologists held a business meeting with an election of officers. Prof. Alfred G. Meyer of the Carnegie institute was elected president. Prof. Gilman A. Drew, resident assistant director of the marine biological laboratory at Woods Hole, Mass., was elected vicepresident and Dr. J. F. Jerrold, secretary and treasurer.

At a meeting of the directors of the marine biological laboratory of Woods Hole plans were considered for a large new laborator; building. There were 82 investigators at the school last summer, the largest in its history.

While it is a noticeable fact in these figures that 1910 exceeded 1911 in completed work by $496,275, it is nevertheless true much of this year's activity was commenced this fall and will be completed early in 1912. Another fact worth remembering in comparing these 1911 figures, is that all government, state, county, railroad and park buildings are exempt from taxation, hence do not go through the building permit department. There have been many improvements of this kind made

A FAVORABLE FORECAST FOR THE NEW YEAR

ST. LOUIS-James H. Brookmire, president of the Brookmire Economic Chart Company, the inventor of a "panic forecaster" and business barometer, in a forecast just issued says that the outlook for the new year is favorable.

In his opinion it takes three conditions the same as during the last year.

From the present indications of his many. barometer and cartographical invention, A year ago call money in Boston was Mr. Brookmire concludes that we are quoted at 4@41/2 per cent, time money still in the period of readjustment, which was nominally 41/4@43/4 per cent, and $6,604.925 and two years ago $3,879.050, it was necessary to undergo after the commercial paper 41/2 @ 43/4 per cent, with business liquidation of 1910 before exceptions at 41/4 per cent. In New business could go ahead. He says the York a year ago money on call ruled country is fundamentally sound, that a from 5(a7 per cent, six months money good volume of business is being done, was 3%@4 per cent and commercial that business is well liquidated and on a paper 464% per cent. Two years ago firm foundation and that money is plen- call money in Boston was 51/2@6 per tiful. All that is needed, therefore, to cent, six months money 43/4 @ 51/2 per cent better political conditions.

Brookmire says: business men over expand their busi- time money and commercial paper 4@ ness; that is, they produce more than 41/2 per cent. when the banks have extended credit to currency was still commanding a prebusiness men as far as the laws allow, they must either refuse further credit and cause a panic, or break the law, clared the regular semi-annual dividend This explains why Wall street is always 503,398 boxes 63,874,250 pounds butter, 1 per cent, payable Jan. 15, 1912, to bankers sympathize with the business man and give him the credit he desires A quarterly dividend of 1 per cent has after the legal limit of credit extension accused of starting a panic. RANGE OF MONEY

The year 1911 has been one of fairly easy money conditions. Business and speculation have been dull and depressed, to make prosperity-easy money, good and therefore money has not been in crops and a satisfactory political out large demand. Rates, however, have look. Based on the present conditions been governed more by the absence of Mr. Brookmire predicts that there will demand than by an abundance of supbe no expansion in business before next ply. The highest rates for money were summer, and that in the meantime the seen at the beginning and the closing volume of business will continue about of the year. We have been large loaners of money abroad, especially to Ger-

BOXBOARD PLANS REORGANIZATION

CHICAGO-Brokers who usually repesent inside interests have been ag gressive buyers of United Boxboard stock. According to current reports, the Boxboard company will let the American Strawboard Company go under fore-closure of the collateral trust mortgage, and the Boxboard company will be reorganized by itself. The plan as nearly as can be learned is to assess both the holders of the present capital stock of that company. The bonds will be scaled down and exchanged for preferred stock, the latter to be 6 per cent non-cumulative. If this is done Boxboard will have no fixed charges, other than that of a few small underlying issues of bonds.

BUSINESS IS CAUSE

(Special to the Monitor)

JOHANNESBURG, Transvaal, S. A .-The decision of Sir George Farrar to resign his seat and to retire from political life has caused a great sensation throughout the country.

Sir George has found that his political work is interfering with his duties as chairman of the East Rand Proprietary Mines and as he feels that his whole energies should be devoted to the affairs of the company to which his connection means so much he has been forced to a decision which is characteristic of the courage for which he is so well known. FREEMASONS SEEK 10.000.000 SIXPENCES

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON-The Freemasons of the grand lodge of England have evolved a scheme for the building of a fine Masonic temple in London, and are receiving the cordial cooperation of the coun try lodges in this project. There is no desire to hurry forward the work or to advertise in any way for funds.

"The need for a Masonic temple is not pressing," an officer explained to a representative of the Standard. "At least a quarter of a million pounds would be necessary to do what is desired, and so large a project should be the result of the united effort of all the Masons of the grand lodge in England."

A sixpenny contribution, which is to be automatically received by the treasurer of the grand lodge, has been levied; no fewer than 10,000,000 simpences are required. This amount will take over 20 years to amass."

The Masons are, however, not to be limited to the sum of sixpence in subscribing, and the scheme will possibly be put into operation in less than half the expected time.

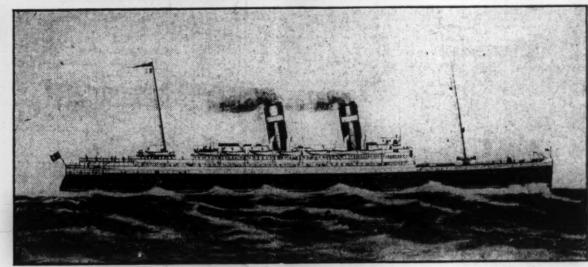

"There are at present 33,000 masons; should all who have a right to go to the Freemasons hall," explained the officer, "wish to attend, they would find accommodation for not more than 700. That fact, however, is not pressing forward the question of the new temple As yet," he concluded, "we want 9,000,000 sixpences."

At this conference the war minister of the dual empire, General von Auffenberg, who was appointed when the late minister who supported Count Aehrenthal was compelled to retire, laid before the ministers the military estimates for the coming financial year.

In presenting these he insisted strongly that the triple alliance was in the throes of disruption, and that, in these circumstances, it was imperatively necessary to strengthen the southern frontier by immediately increasing the quota of recruits by 30,000 men.

This proposal was strongly opposed by Count Aehrenthal, who denied that the triple alliance was in any such condi tion, and who insisted that such a panic scheme would only succeed in disorganizing the system. In particular, the foreign minister questioned the accuracy of the minister of war's statements respect-

"If we be ignorant," say the translators of 1611, "the Scriptures will instruct us; if out of the way, they will bring as home; if out of order, they will reform us; if in heaviness, comfort us; if dull, quicken us; if cold, inflame us. Tolle lege; Tolle lege." The blessings which it can bestow depend on yourselves and on the grace of God which you seek in prayer. Read as a scoffer, read as a Pharisee, and it will be uscless to you. Read it rightly, and it will indeed be a light unto your feet and a lamp unto your path: Read it teachably, read it devotionally. The Year 1911 and Posterity

HISTORICAL perspectives change so with the passing of time that it is a bit presumptuous to say now what have been the most significant events of the year 1911. The best that can be done is to indicate some of the happenings that now seem extraordinary. and let "the grinding attrition of time" reduce to the dimensions of the ordinary, happenings that now seem relatively important. For Americans resident in the United States the most fundamentally important completed political act of the year has been final judicial interpretation of the Sherman antitrust law. Together with subsequent action by the executive department of the government, it has forced upon the public and upon Congress further debate and legislation dealing with a problem correct solution of which is vital to preservation of democracy. Incidentally, also, the court's decree, with its far-reaching effects, has renewed discussion of the future of the court itself and how far judicial procedure is to be reshaped in the light of altered ethical and political ideals.

Canada, prompted by a variety of motives, has rejected reciprocity in trade with the United States and in this and other ways demonstrated a growing national consciousness and self-assertion that will force British imperial officials as well as neighbors in the United States to reckon with the Dominion in a diminished mood of condescension and patronage. Mexico has passed through a comparatively bloodless revolution. Former President Diaz, supposed to be a "benevolent despot," indispensable to the economic welfare of a people needing his paternal control, is an exile in Europe. President Madero has not found it difficult to show that a champion of less arbitrary and more democratic ideals of government can arise from the ranks of the landed proprietors and by his candor and his courage prove that tyranny, even under republican forms, is odious to the rank and file of Mexicans.

In its radicalism and the scope of its direct and indirect political, moral and intellectual effects, molding not only the destiny of an ancient and vast empire but also that of a continent and compelling reshaping of international policies, nothing done during the past twelve months approaches in import the revolt against the Manchu dynasty in China and the rise to power of an occidental, democratic ideal of a constitutional government. It has not been a case of Bourbon overthrow by a military genius and political schemer with limitless ambition such as transformed Europe early in the last century, but rather a mass movement led by scholars, journalists and merchants, weary of racial and national humiliation, of immemorial graft and alien rule.

In Europe it has been a year of diplomatic tension arising from events in Turkey, Morocco; Tripoli and Persia that have tested to the utmost persons responsible for preservation of peace and maintenance of the alliances with which the year opened. Shiftings of position have taken place or are now under way that mean much to the future of Europe, Africa and Asia. Coincident with this there has been recurrent evidence of abiding internal strife in many of the leading European nations due in most cases to class feuds, but occasionally to issues that are religious or racial in origin.

The world seems nearer the era of peace and goodwill, however, if for no other reason because President Taft and Secretary Knox have done their part to commit the American republic to unlimited arbitration of international disputes, a noble sentiment that the British and French governments have reciprocated. The move for arbitration may prove to have been, in human history, the great event of 1911.

The Business Situation

IN MANY ways the year just closing has been one of the most eventful ever experienced by the business interests of the United States. Doubtless it has been the most trying period the large corporations ever have had to undergo. Almost the entire twelve months have been given to readjustment and reorganization. That these institutions have been enabled to withstand the ordeal and that the industries of the country generally have not been more seriously affected speaks well for the solidity of business and the mental stability of business men. At the beginning of the year 1911 the outlook was propitious enough. Predictions were made that it would be a banner year for industry and commerce. When the interstate commerce commission refused to allow railroads to increase their freight rates, following general advances in wages of railroad employees, the first serious check was given to expansion. There was much bitter complaint as a result of this order, but it is now admitted by many to have been a wise step. By far the most important and far-reaching development of the year was the campaign against the trusts and the dissolution of two of the largest ones of the country. Business became much quieter by reason of the trust prosecutions, and for a period during the summer months the depression was pronounced.

It was not in the nature of things for business stagnation to continue long, and in the early fall months a change for the better set in. Improvement has been continuous since then. The crops of the country, particularly the cotton crop, were very satisfactory, although the yield of wheat and corn was not up to expectations. Despite the pessimism prevailing, the demands of more than 90,000,000 consumers were such as to produce a steady and comparatively large volume of day-to-day business. Railway traffic was moderately heavy. Railway companies pared down their expenses and increased the efficiency of operation to such an extent that net earnings are now making a very satisfactory comparison with last year, notwithstanding the higher wages paid.

There is reason for believing that the year 1912 will witness substantial progress in various lines of trade. Orders for steel rails and equipment that have been placed for next year's delivery will keep the mills and factories humming from four to six months to come. There are orders pending which promise still further activity. Last year may be regarded as a good average year for industry, and the new year outlook is still better. No one expects a boom, but a steady expansion seems almost certain. There is much important new financing that has been held in abeyance for more than a year.

If the bond market improves as it is expected to do, some large financial projects doubtless will be undertaken. The new year will start out under more favorable conditions than did the one just closing for the reason that, with the liquidation that has been in progress in various lines, the economies that have been put into practise, and the more conservative methods employed, there has come a much sounder foundation for business. Besides this, people are in a more constructive frame of mind. Sentiment is better. It now looks as if neither tariff readjustments nor the presidential election would seriously retard industrial growth during the next twelve months.

WITH the whole world preparing to go amotoring, as it were, on both land and water, manufacturers of automobiles and motor craft naturally look about them for new fields to conquer. But while American makers produce cars of stability, comfort and elegance, it has been left for other countries to capture the trade-of the nations south of the equator. Not until 1911 did American motor cars gain any kind of standing in Rio de Janeiro, for example, and the Brazilian automobile journal, Revista de Automoveis, even claims that this is little less than an anachronism. There are for sale in Brazil today no less than 131 kinds of machines, suitable for passengers and goods traffic. On the score of motor trucks, the American makes undoubtedly are well in the lead, and a splendid market awaits the manufacturers who will take advantage of their opportunities. As for finding purchasers, therefore, there should be little difficulty, but it may be well for the exporters to heed a recent warning sent out from the southern country. It is said that if there really exists a strong desire to enjoy the automobile trade of a country which has plenty of money to spend, it will be necessary to give the money's worth. In the early stage of selling automobiles in Brazil some of the machines sent down would almost "fall to pieces the moment one spoke harshly to them," as one Brazilian wit has put it. This will not do. The United States has some reputation for excellence in manufacture, and exporters must do their level best to uphold this reputation. Machines found useless elsewhere should not go abroad and throw ill repute on the American industry.

As for motor boats, hardly another part of the world offers a field equal to the Brazilian. Take alone the state of Amazonia, where 45,000 miles of navigable rivers are at the disposal of the inhabitants. One questions whether it will ever be necessary to make the railroad the chief feature of inland transportation in that sections of the country. What can prevent the motor boat from reigning supreme on the mighty Amazon and its thousands of miles of tributaries?

Stars and the Public

THE abandonment but a short time ago of the attempt to establish in New York a playhouse conducted on a scheme less commercial than artistic and the announcement from Berlin of a project of one under the management of actors, gives one a good deal to think about. It raises the old question that is asked by most of us and puzzles most of us, "Commerce or Art?" If we remember aright, Dr. Johnson said that he wrote for a living and he displayed therein an admirable candor. We suppose that even the managers of playhouses would assert that they followed their profession for a living although whether they are like Dr. Johnson is quite another question. No doubt there is a good deal to be said on either side of the question, but we should like to point out that in the German scheme the salaries are to be very modest while in New York the scale of expense was pretty generous. Whether the German plan is to prove a success' we have yet to see, but we have seen that the New York plan, generously as it was financed. did not prove operative. The playhouse in New York was opened with the presence of distinguished men and rich men and things were to be very fine indeed. Not only that, but they were fine, and yet the project did not succeed. In the meantime, what of the public that has to pay for seats?

The public has its peculiarities; one of them is that in its cooler moments it likes to get what it pays for. In theatrical matters it got into the habit from seeing the rich unction of Miss Kate Ryan as Mrs. Malaprop, from listening delighted to Gilbert's old men, to Floydd's Dolly Spanker and the incomparable humor of Mme. Ponisi. These artists were not put on the boards because the manager had told the public that it must like them, but because the public had made that statement independently and in its own behalf. We can pay such actors and actresses no greater compliment than to say that they were educated workmen; they knew their trade and the public rewarded such faithful work with a personal and loyal intelligence that we doubt can be matched by the audiences of the ready-made acting that is furnished today by managers that say with brisk shrewdness that business is business. So it is; but then, so much depends on whose business it is.

At all events, it has been shown in New York on one hand that lavish expense and a stock company do not seem to succeed, and on the other hand, that lavish earning and companies most decidedly not stock do succeed. In this latter case, success means principally that of the box office, but how far up or how far down the system leads the public taste is matter for impartial meditation.

It is said that the women voters of California outnumber the men by 87,000. This is according to the census taken by the Women's Progressive League of Los Angeles, which places the registry in the last election at 670,140 women and 583,000 men. Either the ladies are not yet fully alive to their opportunity or else they are indisposed to be too hard on the men.

A CAKE of soap and a wash basin were taken from a western court house a few nights ago and it is difficult to say from the tenor of the published reports whether the community affected is complaining or boasting about the circumstance.

THEY are talking in Washington of making money out of clay. This, of course, would be nothing new. In fact some of the most desirable kind of money is made of dust.

IDAHO won the first prize for potatoes at the St. Paul land show, and to say that she is proud would be doing only scant justice to her exultation.

THE mistaken idea seems to prevail still among certain elements and in certain quarters of many of the larger cities of the United States that there are times when the operation of law and even of the common rules of decency are suspended by tacit consent on the part of the constituted authorities. A point forgotten is that such suspension is beyond the power of any constituted authority. There can be no times or seasons in which the law may be ignored or flouted with impunity. The days of saturnalia passed by long ago; the New Year's eve disturbance, too long tolerated in this country, has, we trust, about

The protest against it is more emphatic and the demand for its suppression is more insistent now than ever before. In several of the cities there are strong public movements against the relaxation of police regulations that give license to disorder on the last night of the old year. Here and there the plea and demand for law enforcement and law observance on New Year's eve as at all other times is being resisted, but there is encouragement and some assurance of early victory in the fact that the public conscience has been aroused in communities where there has been the greatest freedom in the past.

If the idea that one night in the year may be given up to unbridled revelry has been gaining ground among youth in communities noted generally for their orderliness, it is time that this idea were crushed out, and the governments of the cities in which it has taken deepest root should be induced by popular opinion to take action in the right direction.

A COMMISSIONER of education in a state like New York speaks with considerable official authority. If, as in the case of Dr. Andrew S. Draper, he happens to have had prior experience as president of a state university and to be an author of much timely literature bearing on educational methods and aims, whatever he may say is doubly important. Consequently his recent use of an opportunity to address a large gathering of heads of secondary schools as an occasion for a severe indictment of the colleges and universities of the country for their "lust for riches and bigness and social influence" deserves to be considered soberly. And the more so because Commissioner Draper seems to agree with critics like Woodrow Wilson, A. Lawrence Lowell and Owen Wister that the result of overemphasis upon externals has had a demoralizing effect upon the teachers and youth and has led them to bow to false ideals and cease to be fruitful as scholars.

Commissioner Draper, of course, would be the first to admit that if American university administrators during the era just closing have made over much of "houses and barns," they have been representative of their age and nation. Given a sudden striking influx of students economically equipped for an academic career by their parents' prosperity, and at the same time the proffer on the part of men of means of marvelous sums for institutional equipment and enrichment on the "plant" side, it required men of exceptional strength of purpose and devotion to the spiritual and idealistic aspects of academic life to resist the temptation to exalt "bigness" as a test of final institutional success.

Fortunately, signs have not been lacking of late that new standards are being set up, or rather that there is a turning back to earlier traditions. Adequate payment of teachers, restoration of a measure of faculty authority in realms where professors are expert, more formal recognition and honoring of students who disclose intellectual capacity, establishment of university presses, promotion of authorship by professors and heartier encouragement of direct service of the community by the university staff, these are some of the most vital aspects of American university activity today.

THE merits of Mr. Edison's claim for a larger share of the profits from motion picture exhibitions than comes to him at present is a matter for the courts to deal with. A case involving the increase of royalties in which Mr. Edison shares at present from $20,000 to $50,000 a week is now before the highest tribunals in the land. Many technical points and complicated details are woven into the proceedings, but it is not difficult, nevertheless, to release from the web a feature of the case that will have interest for the general public.

The motion picture industry is only one of many created within the last few years. It belongs to the wonderful group made up, in part at least, of the phonograph, the automatic piano player, the typewriter, the automobile, the electric light, the trolley car, the telephone. All of these are inventions of yesterday. People who are still young can remember when most of them were not. They all belong to this generation. What they mean to the world of today may be best understood by an attempt to imagine what the world of today would be without them. Aside from such utility as they possess, such pleasure as they give, they have added immensely to the volume of industrial production and trade, and, as may be seen in this single instance, they are contributing immensely to the creation of wealth. A business from which may be distributed in royalties from $20,000 to $50,000 weekly has grown out of the motion picture alone. Of course, this represents only a small fraction of the gross amount of money turned over in preparation for and production of the films. We have no data on the subject at present, but the picture show business in any city of considerable size may be taken as a basis for rough calculation as to the capital and the labor employed. If the entire group referred to be taken into account, the result of anything like careful computation will show that these inventions are today using billions of money and millions of men and women. The world would doubtless feel the loss if by any possibility it should be deprived of them, and yet there is every reason for believing that the world today is deprived of inventions of even greater consequence that the next generation will enjoy and soon come to regard as commonplace.

BOOKS to the number of 13,470 were published in the United States within the present year. Almost every possible subject was covered, of course, or it might be more proper to say, instead of covered, that almost every possible subject was uncovered.
